

BMT FOR SAFETY 2016

Conference and Workshop Manchester, UK

Conference: 2nd November
Workshop: 3rd November

The Conference: 2nd November

The key to sustainable safe and healthy working is to focus on the creation of a safe working environment. This environment is primarily created by leaders and their planners. Everything that succeeds or fails in that environment does so because of people, so influencing the everyday behaviours of people is the most important thing.

Leading representatives from industry will share how they have used the principles of behavioural science to achieve sustainable improvements in a wide variety of health, safety, wellbeing and other areas. By changing their own leadership behaviours, they have created the environment for work to be carried out efficiently, effectively and safely in both the short and long terms.

Speakers

Our speakers are industry leaders and behavioural experts from the US and UK, including:

- Dr Richard Kazbour, Managing Director, Harkera
- Chris Pike, Development Director, Arcadis
- Craig Reade, Head of Project Delivery at Costain Atkins Black & Veatch JV
- Howard Lees, Managing Director, Hollin
- Richard Yates, National Roads Telecommunicaton Service
- Allison Reynolds, Science-Based Leadership
- Bruce Faulkner, 3 Simple Rules

The Workshop: 3rd November

In a change to previous years, our workshop will take place the day after the conference. On 3rd November, you can join one of the small groups (no more than twenty people) to learn about applying behavioural science to safety.

The session will have something for everyone: It will be accessible to newcomers as well as featuring the latest working practices so that experienced BMT practitioners go home with something new to try as well. The workshop day gives everyone an excellent opportunity to interact with our speakers, network and learn in a pleasant and relaxed atmosphere.
